Circuit Court-Heiskell, Judge. The following cases are for trial to-day: I 5137, Newsom vs Frazer et al. executors:

HEAVY DAMAGES

Assessed against the Memphis and Charleston Railway Company in ty Jury-A Verdiet Born . of Vindictiveness.

HILLSBORO, ALA., April 20 .- At the recent term of the circuit court of Lawrence county, Alabama, of which county I am at present a citizen, a verdict for damages empany was found by a jury of my fellowcitizens, which was in my judgment so un-just and so exorbitant that I think it due to the people of this county to state, through of our citizens disapprove in toto the spirit in which that verdict was rendered. It appeared in evidence that on the thirty-first of January, 1877, a Mr. Copeland got off the passenger train at Town Creek, and in attempting to pass between the cars of a freight train, which had been switched off on a sidetrack between the main track and the depot, he was knocked down and killed by the freight train as it was backing out from the side-track. The conductor, engineer, and other employes of the railroad, all swore positively that the bell was rung, and the whistle blowed, and also that Mr. Copeland had been warned not to pass between or under the cars, but other witnesses having testified that they did not hear the bell or the whistle, the jury gave a verdict of twenty-five thousand dollars dam-ages, and wrote in their return, on the back of the verdict, that they were only sorry they could not find for even a heavier sum against the railroad. The spirit of the verdict was evidently vindictive and the damages excessive, even admitting that Copeland had been killed entirely through the negligence of the company. But when it is considered that he was trying to pass under a train, and that the company proved that the usual signal was given, it must be evident that this jury gave way too much to their sympathies for the unfortunate man, and, perhaps, to their prejudice against the railroad. I was not personally acquainted with more than one or two of the jurymen, but there seemed to be they certainly showed none in their verdict. It must be apparent to all thinking men that no railroad company can afford to pay such enormous sums for accidents of the character announced as the orator. Every night this woted a public nuisance, there ought to be week somebody will address the people at the the destruction of human life, at least in causes like the above, where there is great imprudence on the part of the victims. It appears that in Tennessee the supreme cour has the power to revise the action of the lower courts in the assessment of excessive penalties, but in Alabama the practice different, and even if the case is remande there is no remedy for the excessive damages. Now, no railroad can afford to do business in a country where such a spirit of vindictiveness is manifested, and the intelligent citizens of Lawrence are apprehensive that the Mem-Charleston railroad company forced to run their will be forced to run their trains through this county without stopping for fear of killing somebody in getting on or off. Surely, if they had the legal right they would be justified, morally, in giving our stations the goody until our citizens should stations the go-by until our citizens should be led to feel that they had forfeited a great public benefit in their morbid desire to compensate a widow and children for the reckless conduct of an imprudent husband and father. An appeal, it is true, has been taken to the supreme court, but the next jury may assess even heavier penalties than this one has done. Of course, the lawyers did not expect to reclaimed, but, finding a willing jury, we may expect them, next time, to put the claim at fifty thousand or a hundred thousand dollars. Why not, when the counsel for the plaintiff Reis and Mottan will sing several popular told the jury that the company would only

The Torrent of Waters Pours Down for Eighteen Hours and Creates a Little Deluge-The Damage Done in the City

About three o'clock yesterday afternoon the rains quit falling and the storm broke. Since nine o'clock Monday evening the storm continued, the rain fell in floods amid thunder and continuous flashes and blazes of brilliant lightening. The forked-lightning on Monday night left a trail of light behind it as it darted across the black sky. The trail resembled that of a meteor or a sky-rocket. The lightning struck and shattered rocket. The lightning struck and shattere the chimney of the residence of Mr. A. M'Lendon, on Marshall avenue. Several other houses were struck, but no serious damage was done. THE FLOOD OF WATER turned Bayou Gayoso into a roaring and mad orrent, which went seething and whirling into Wolf river and out into the Mississippi. body school, went with the rest. The loss of this bridge will prove a great inconvenience to the children attending school, but we presume it will be replaced by the city as soon as possible. The main bridges at the different street-crossings of Bayou Gayoso (except that on Second street) have withstood the rush of the waters, and are now safe. That on Jeftha waters are now safe. The waters are now safe. The loss of reduction were with drawn. A small minority opposed the motion and proposed a compromise.

All advices confirm the collapse of the strike in Preston. A Manchester correspondent telegraphs that this result is traceable to the action of the spinners, who are proportionately more numerous at Preston than in any the waters cutting away the embankment on the east side, and threatening to wash out the east end of the bridge.

Stubbornness of the Manchester Master Cotton-Spinners-The Strike Ended at Preston-Righty or Ninety Thousand Operatives in the Strike.

LONDON, April 23.—At a meeting of the Master cotton-spinners association, at Man-chester to-day, they finally resolved it would neither refer the dispute to arbitration nor accept any mediation. A telegram from Preston states that the strike there is ended, the spinners having resolved to work on the best terms obtainable The weavers, winders and warpers are a
